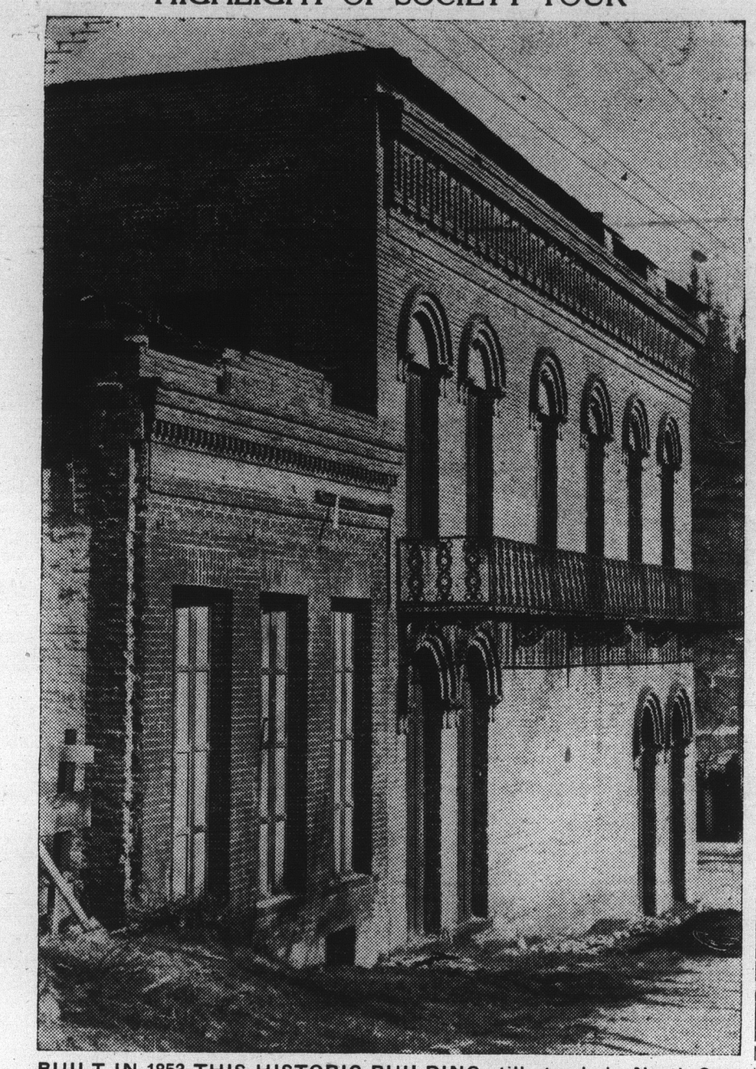
HIGHLIGHT OF SOCIETY TOUR



BUILT IN 1853 THIS HISTORIC BUILDING still stands in North San Juan. It was occupied in the heyday of hydraulic mining by a number of the most important mining and water companies of the San Juan Ridge. The biggest of these water companies were the Eureka Lake and Yuba Canal Company and the South Yuba Canal Company. These two systems cost over three million dollars.

North San Juan is Stop No. 2 in the annual Nevada County Historical Society tour May 29. Speakers in each community will give history highlights of the area. The public is welcome to make this interesting seven-hour tour. Kern Fogarty, retired San Juan postmaster will be the Historical Society historian for this community. Fred Conners will give the history of Sweetland and Mrs. Helen Sawyer the story of Sebastopol, the town that has now completely disappeared. Mrs. Amelia Cunningham, society director, will be among the guests to answer questions about the locality.

Bob Paine of Nevada City, who is in charge of this year's tour, made a preliminary survey of the planned route in company with H. P. Davis, historian, two weeks ago. Davis has prepared a detailed map which will be used both as a souvenir and guide for those making the tour.

MEN FIGHT SNOW TO BRING BODY OF MARKS OUT

A part of nine men staged a terrific battle with snow yesterday to bring out the frozen body of James W. Marks, 44, Woodland flier killed April 6 in a plane crash at Sanford lake, 30 miles north east of here.

The group, headed by Deputy Sheriff John Blackburn, left here yesterday morning at 6 o'clock and arrived at the scene of the wreckage at 2:30 after several hours of battling snow with jeeps and a bulldozer. Others in the party were Deputy Coroner Larry Myers, George Endter, two reporters from the Sacramento Union, Ranger Lester Williams of Big Bend station, Willis Marks and William Marks, brother and cousin of the dead man, and Hugh Steinhoff.

The group got as far as Fuller lake without incident. At that point it was necessary to bulldoze the road clear for 7½ to 10 miles, according to Myers. The group was then able to go three miles by jeep and walked in the last mile and a half.

The body was in a shallow portion of the lake at the foot of a 1,000 foot cliff overlooked by Grouse Ridge lookout station.

The men pulled the body back by sled to the jeeps and returned here at 6:25 p.m., last night.

The body was taken to Myers Grass Valley Mortary from where it will be taken to Woodland this morning.

Endter was flying fire patrol Tuesday with Vane Pitney of the forest service when he sighted what looked like the wing of a plane in Sanford lake. Notifying Wilils Marks, the brother and cousin, accompanied by Endter, Frank Hile and William Nash, went to the scene of the wreckage Wednesday where the brother identified the body.

GRASS VALLEY OPENS FOOTHILL LEAGUE SUNDAY

Bob Radley will be probable starting pitcher for the Merchants Sunday afternoon at Pioneer park here when the local team opens the 1949 season of play in the Foothill league against Grass Valley, according to an announcement by Ralph Childers, manager and first baseman.

Opening day ceremonies will be mastered by Merrill "Buzz" Colvin, president of Nevada City Athletic club, sponsors of the team. Colvin will introduce the team managers. A city official will throw the first ball of the game.

Childers has called a final practice session for tonight and urges all candidates for the squad be present.

Besides Childers and Radley, candidates for the club are Fred Anderson, Chester Brady, Bob Cole, Jack Coley, Ed Frantz, Walter Hawkins, Charles Hawkins, Hollis Hill, Burns Larson, Herschal Lotz, Charles Morris, Peter Scribner, Bob Smithson, Dave Tobiassen, Ed Wojcik and John Cartoscelli.

Frank Stewart, chairman of the committee in charge of the uniform benefit show scheduled Friday, June 3, in the high school auditorium, said this morning the program of songs and skits is developing exceedingly well. He is being assisted by Colvin and J. Howard Penrose. Tentative performers include the high school orchestra directed by Willard Goerz, four mailbags from the postoffice, Lucy and Chet Murchell, Diana Davis, choral group directed by William Tobiassen, high school quartet, Laura Hayhurst, Al Schweigert, Diana Rankin, Bob Peterson and Dick Prine.

BASEBALL TEAM PLAYS 2 GAMES OVER WEEKEND

Nevada Citys' undermanned representative in the Placer-Nevada league will play the league-leading Wolf & Royer club in Roseville tomorrow night under the ights. The game is scheduled to start at 8:15 p.m.

Marvin Haddy, manager of the local team, announced the loss of four players this week leaving the club with only 10 players. Fred Anderson, Ralph Childers and Bob Radley were released to play in in the local entry of the Foothill League. George Cameron, slugging jack of all positions, suffered a fractured wrist in last Sunday's game against Roseville and is lost for several weeks. Cameron says he is hanging up his spikes for good.

Monday afternoon the Auburn Cubs invade Pioneer park for a holiday game. Play ball will be called at 2:30 o'clock.

PRICE OF MILK WILL DROP ONE CENT JUNE 1

Minimum prices to be paid by consumers for fluid milk sold in the Placer-Nevada marketing area will be reduced one cent per quart effective Wednesday, June 1.

The reduction in the minimum prices was announced by the bureau of milk control, state department of agriculture.

The new minimum prices will be 18.6 cents per quart for milk purchased in stores or delivered to homes.

On the same date the minimum price to be paid dairymen by distributors will be lowered at a rate of one cent per quart.

The main factor in determining that the minimum prices should be reduced, the bureau said, are lower milk prodction costs realized throgh taking cows off expensive feeding stuffs and turning them to pasture. Aonther factor is the rapid decline in the price paid dairymen by milk processing plants for milk used in the manufacture of dairy products, such as evaporated milk, butter, powered milk, etc.

Under the California milk control act, the bureau, in establishing minimum prices, must take into consideration and give adequate weight to the relationship between the price paid by distributors for milk sold in bottles and the price paid for milk used in processing.

The reduction in the minimum prices was ordered by the bureau on the basis of evidence and testimony received at a public milk price hearing held in Nevada City on May 20.

Ralph Poulter On Navy Cruise to Japan

Ralph G. Poulter, son of Mrs. Ada May Scheurn, who enlisted in the navy, is now stationed aboard the USS Fort Marion, a landing ship.

Ralph was assigned to the ship on completion of recruit training period at San Diego naval training center, and is now receiving "on the job" welders training in the ship repair department.

STEEL MAN HERE

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford W. Lord, Los Angeles, is visiting in this area. He was born and raised in Grass Valley where he was a star fullback on the high school team of the 1900-10 era. His grandfather, George Lord, was a sheriff of Nevada county in the 1870's. Lord is vice-president of U. S. Steel Corporation.

Al Jaynes of the Tyler area reported to sheriff's office Tuesday his place of business, known as Al's Corner was burglarized some time Sunday morning. In addition to petty thievery the burglars opened a can of fish, beer, potato chips and crackers for a small feast at the lunch counter.

New Furance for Jail And Sheriff Is Being Installed This Week

Workmen from the Alpha Hardware Co. are installing a new oil-burning furnace to furnish heat for the sheriff's office and the county jail. The job of installation is expected to be completed within the next few weeks.

Bids were received for the furnace installation last winter after the other furnace had to be taken out. During the long, cold winter, the entire building was heated from the main furnace. The new heating plant costing $2,493.49, will be in service for the next winter season.

YELLOWJACK'TS END SUCCESSFUL BASEBALL PLAY

The Yelowjackets completed a successful baseball season. They beat Grass Valley both times out. Sure the local prides lost all their other games but that odesn't reflect against the success of the season.

Dick Penrose broke up Tuesday's game with a double into the rocks for a 6-4 victory. The score had been tied from the fifth inning. Coleman walked, Cartoscelli singled to set the stage for Penrose's double.

The game was played at Pioneer park.

Grass Valley Bees gained some share of the glory walloping Bob Bonner's Bees 14-8 in Watt park, Grass Valley the same day.

C. R. CLINCH CHAIRMAN OF BOND DRIVE

A substantial portion of the $50 billion worth of U. S. savings bonds held by Americans are today paying their owners approximately 4 per cent interest.

This was pointed out today by C. R. Clinch, chairman of the Nevada county volunteer committee aiding in the U. S. treasury department's nation-wide opportunity drive to sell $1,040,000,000 in series "E" savings bonds during May and June.

"The return on savings bonds—four dollars for each three invested—adds up to 2.9 percent interest if held for the full 10-year period," Clinch said.

"However, the interest rate during the last four years is much higher than in the earlier years. Therefore, owners holding savings bonds purchased five or six years ago are today reaping the highest possible return foh guaranteed investments in the current market."

Clinch's committee is intensifying sales of savings bonds through the three regularly-established buying channels: payroll savings, the bond-a-month bank plan, and throuhg extra individual purchases at post offices and banks.

P. G. Scadden Issues $7500 Building Permits

P. G. Scadden, county assessor, issued $7500 in building permits this past week.

Walter R. Jensen, Grass Valley, plans a $1500 business building at Whiting and Auburn streets.

Genevieve S. Kraeger and Catherine Hines each plan a $3,000 frame home in Cherry Creek Acres.

CONCERT TICKET SALE WILL END ON SATURDAY

Campaign for sale of tickets to the Twin Cities Concert Association series for 1949-50 will end tomorrow evening, according to an announcement by Jack Siegfried, chairman of the Nevada City part of the drive. Membership is on an annual basis and no tickets will be sold after tomorrow.

Lloyd Geist, president of the association, presided at a meeting of concert workers Monday evening at Bret Harte Inn, Grass Valley to start the week-long campaign.

Principal speaker was Robert Stafford, New York representative of the Community Concert association. Stafford instructed the workers as to campaign details and emphasized the advantage of reaching the 1200 membership goal.

A membership of this number will assure five concerts by top artists. The quality and quantity of fall concerts depends on the number of members.

Stafford also underlined the reciprocity arrangement with the Sacramento association this year. Annually 2000 seats are available in Sacramento for visiting members and it is the desire of the association to see these seats filled. Because of the size of the Sacramento association such artists as Feruccio Talivini, tenor, appear.

Providing an enjoyable interlude a color, sound film of artists available for community concerts was shown by Stafford, assisted by Clay Caldwell, who provided the projector and screen.

Elementary Students Present Radio Play

The Nevada City elementary school presented a radio program over KGFN last evening. Miss Ruth Rogan's fifth grade students enacted, "Jack and the Bean Stalk". William Tobiassen directed the elementary school chorus.

MEMORIAL DAY

The observance of Memorial Day serves to impress upon us not only how much we owe to those who gave their lives in defense of our country, but what we owe to those who would have to bear the brunt of the battle should war come again.

We can pay no greater tribute to the dead than to strive to make this world a warless world—the kind of world they hoped it would be.

In so doing we shall help to prevent any further increase in the great "silent army" and enable our young men to devote their talents mainly to peaceful pursuits.

In seeking a lasting peace, however, we must heed the lessons of the past. We know now that war cannot be avoided or justice preserved through appeasement. We know that firmness—and, yes, even toughness on some occasions—will do more to prevent armed conflict than weakneed subservience.

There are difficult obstacles on the road to a warless world, but we must be willing to fight for its attainment with all our energy, tenacity and skill. To do less would be to betray both those who gave their lives in battle and those who would have to make the supreme sacrifice should war come again.

"NEIN! NEIN!"

It was unfortunate for the Russians that they got walloped with one of the worst political black eyes ever just before the start of the Foreign Ministers Conference in Paris.

Of course, it wasn't supposed to have been that way. The election in Eastern Germany was designed to present "convincing" proof that the Germans behind the Iron Curtain were wholeheartedly supporting the "peoples" program for a united Germany.

But even the Russians admit that one-third of the people voted against the Kremlin's hand-picked slate of candidates, and you can be pretty sure that the actual vote was much more heavily negative. This result is all the more unusual because of the people in Eastern Germany know that a "Nein" vote is made at the risk of their own safety and that of their families. The usual score in a behind-the-curtain election is 99 per cent in favor of the slate.

Of course, the Soviets can claim that the voters were victims of "lying propaganda from imperialistic nations". But that in itself would be an admission that Russian propaganda is falling down.

No matter what is said at Paris the Soviets have lost important ground—and they know it.

LOSS OF MORAL POWER

In its conclusion to a long editorial on compulsory government health insurance, Life magazine says, "What worries us is the loss of moral power that must come when a people turns more and more to compulsion to solve its problems. Left to their own devices, the U. S. people have shown both ingenuity and ability in meeting their needs through voluntary action. Without state compulsion they have created the best medicine in the world. What is more, they have demonstrated that America can shape the social instruments necessary to a modern society without relinquishing the fredoms and responsibilities that make it strong."

The fight against compulsory health insurance is not a selfish fight against improving medical service to the American people. The country needs more doctors. It needs more hospital beds and other facilities. The point is how to get these additional requirements without destroying the magnificent achievements we have already made. Senator Smith of New Jersey described the problem admirably in this little parable: "I think of a man who lives in a fine big house with a leaky roof. The man says, 'This is horrible . . . We must tear down the house and go build a wonderful new jail and live in the jail instead.' " Compulsory health insurance, which would inevitably regiment and subject to political coercion the medical profession of the nation, would be such a jail.

What, then, is the proper solution to the medical care problems we have left? It lies in the voluntary prepayment medical plans which now serve some 50,000,000 people, in the constant progress the doctors and scientists are making in both extending and improving standards of care, in some workable means of helping those who are actually indigent. Then we can have even better health—without the jail.

The object of punishment is threefold: for just retribution; for the protection of society; for the reformation of the offender. —Tryon Edwards

Just Wonderin'

I Wonder now as summer comes
To smile from sunny skies of blue,
To fill the land with fragrant charms
And make fair nature fresh and new,
If we may answer to the call
Of blossom time and steal away
To revel in the sight and sounds
Of just one perfect day.

A poet once propounded this question, "what is so rare as a day in June?" Once in a state of unlimited enthusiasm I answered, "any old day in California." Since that time I have sampled several changing seasons and now I feel ready to repeat the poet's query and respond with a "nothing is so rare as a day in June—in California.

June is the month of roses, brides, wedding bells and; and speaking of roses, at this very moment, they are blooming in rare profusion and we catch their fragrance upon every passing breeze.

Long ago Father Junipero Serra said of the roses of California, "they are like the roses of Castile," and if that is true, Castile is to be congratuated.

Plant a rose and you will have planted something that will persist, for roses despite their seeming fragility are strangely tenacious of life and this fact is apparent to those who follow the old pioneer trails of the west, especially along the Mother Lode country.

Several years ago, we treked one day to Michigan Bar; it was a beautiful day in early spring with blue skies above and green grass beneath our fee; upon the shore of the quietly flowing river we came upon a delapidated group of old huts—pioneer cabins in the last stages of dust and decay, but at the door of one we found a rose bush in full bloom, filling the place with its fresh fragrance and telling a tale of a long, long vigil in a place where it had once ben planted by loving hands and tended with watchful care.

Whose were the hands that once caressed it,
Watered and tended with loving care?
What were the words once whispered to it,
As it grew and budded and blossomed there?

We do not know the history of the rose tree at Michigan Bar; but we have in our own care at the present time an equally long lived rose and its history is very well known to quite a number of people. It was planted by a pioneer woman, Mrs. F. F. Mobley, probably as far back as the early sixties. For many years it had no care—no attention, but it did not grow discouraged. Every spring it put forth new foliage and covered itself with a profusion of sweet, old fashioned flowers. True to all that the past had taken, it waited for the coming of some on one who would love it and appreciate its tale of faithfulness.

Once or twice during its long years of waiting, fire swept over it, burning it so that it seemed all life must have perished, but not so, the very next spring it came up from the roots and produced a few roses upon its new branches.

I often think of Liberty as, the rose of the world, and liken it to the rose upon our garden wall; then I am not afraid when it is threatened or when in some lands and under certain circumstances it meets with seeming defeat. Liberty is like our pioneer rose tree; it is tenacious of life and always its powers of recuperation are ready to spring into flower again, when the season is propitious and the sun is ready to shine down upon it. Yes, Liberty is the Rose of the World, let those who are privileged to enjoy its fragrance, watch and tend it with loving care.

GOLD DIGGER'S TRAIL

Charles Scott Haley

One thing that irked a good many of us who had had several years of engineering experience, was the assignment to positions above us of young West Point graduates who were plainly unlicked cubs as far as the mechanics of engineering work was concerned, and yet who were in a position to make or break engineers of years experience and training. Almost one entire class who would ordinarily have served an apprenticeship as "shavetail" lieutenants, were quickly elevated to the rank of major, and placed in command of various encampments. This was hard for some of us to take, but we had already learned discipline; and also some of these officers were conscious of their shortcomings and were content to give us our heads in getting work accomplished.

One July day came the underground report that the 521st and 522nd engineers were due for entrainment to embarkation point, and a friend of mine in the 522nd promptly got leave to go to New York to get married to the girl of his choice, and asked me to go along as best man. Thus it happened that I came to the Episcopal church in Brooklyn where my father and mother had been married forty-two years before, and there assisted at another wedding of more military character.

But about the first of August, we received orders, and entrained the night we received them. Our colored lads were wildly excited, and when we ferried across to Hoboken, were quite sure that they had crossed the Atlantic. They were most surprised to find that Jersey City and Hoboken looked almost the same as the rest of the United States. But we embarked on the "Susquehanna"—an old time freighter which was packed to the guards with about two thousand colored troops and five hundred whites—and sailed out past Sandy Hook one brilliant August afternoon with high hearts for adventure. I happened to be made mess officer of my ship, and it was not long before I had to get to work.

The ships officers had arranged mess lines without regard to racial prejudice. As a result, white boys, many of them from the south, were standing in line among and behind negroes. This was not what they were used to, and both they and the negroes resented it. The result was that the first meal that evening caused indescribable confusion, and took about five hours to serve.

The ships officers threw the situation very properly in our laps, and by next morning I had arranged two colored and one white mess line in forward and after gangways which did not interfere with one another. Feeding time was cut down to an hour and a half, which was a lot more satisfactory. But by that time came the old enemy—mal de mer.

Our black children found the ship's canteen, and it was not unusual to see one of them appearing on deck with a package of ginger cakes, one of chocolate sweets, two bars of nut chocolate, one package of sweet pickles, two boxes of sardines, a whole coconut cake, and unlimited quantities of ginger ale, and pop—all at the same time. These he would wolf down with great gusto and little effort. Then a little later, would come retribution. Several trips to the rail and a change in complexion from brown black to green, and then a hasty trip below to his bunk or some ones else. Result, below decks, a terrible mess. We had to drag those poor souls out once a day when they were ready to die, and go over the whole ship with lysol and scrubbing mops.

About the fourth day out the battle cruiser which was guarding us turned round and left for New York, and for another four days the ten ships in the convoy wallowed lonesomely on their zigzag course. At night no lights were permitted to show, and between decks the ghastly blue lamps which were everywhere below, made us all look like an assemblage of fiends when we did foregather in the main saloon. Nevertheless, we found enough talent among our colored friends to stage one good minstrel show.

The weather grew rougher as we approached the European coast, and about the eighth morning we were delighted to see a destroyer convey spring up from nowhere to guard us in. Of course every eye of the whole twenty-five hundred on our ship, and of the thousands on the others, was peeled day and night for the sight of a German periscope. There were two or three practice alarms to get us accustomed to our stations—every man was assigned to a boat or a raft—but we did not know that Fritz had prepared a real party for us, which only head winds had caused us to miss. We were a day late in arriving at Brest, and when we did not arrive on schedule, the Mount Vernon, outgoing for New York, was sunk by the German submarines which had evidently been notified of our coming. So we missed that one, anyway.

But we did not miss the rough weather in the Bay of Biscay. It was the order of all lieutenants to stand two hour watches in the crows nest during the daytime, as lookouts. When one of my own lieutenants, from Utah, originally, was so seasick in the pitching of the topmast that he had to be lowered down by a rope—too sick to climb down—I thought it was time some of the captains took their share of the grief—and for the last few days we stood our watch along with them. Fortunately, I have never been seasick, and it was certainly interesting to watch the destroyers changing positions on all sides of the convoy, hour after hour.

Mr. Tobiassen's MUSIC DEPARTMENT

The seventh and eighth grade chorus students are busy at work learning two, three, and four part music in preparation for the gradation exercise.

Some of the eighth grade boys have formed a quartet and are working hard learning music.

In the primary and intermediate grades, we are taking a general review of songs learned throughout the school year.

THE EIGHTH GRADE

The Nevada City eighth grade has been looking forward to its graduation for many years. But now, at last, it is in the very near future. There will be nearly 60 children in the graduating class.

The girls are wearing pastel colored dresses. Some of them are favoring long stockings. The majority are buying spring or summer sandals.

The boys decided white shirts and slacks will be their choice. They are all wearing ties but are not required to have jackets.

The graduation will take place Wednesday evening, June 8th. All parents and friends are invited to attend.

We certainly hope it will be a big success.

Last week we played Grass Valley in baseball. The girls played hard but couldn't stop the Grass Valley hitters. They lost 24 to 8.

The B team boys mowed down Grass Valley by the score of 18 to 16. Grass Valley's boys played a good game, but they just didn't have quite enough strength.

The A team boys lost by a score of 19 to 2. It looked as though we might win once when we were ahead 2-1, but Lady Luck was on Grass Valley's side.

Our Trip to Sacramento

We left Nevada City at 9 in the morning. We got to Sacramento at about 11 o'clock.

There were five other schools visiting the capitol.

First, Mr. Bonner arranged for us to see the Senate. They were not in session.

Next we went into the treasury department and saw $74,000,000.

After that we went into the assembly where they were having a debate on horse meat.

When we were finished at the Capitol, we went to Sutter's Fort, where we had a wonderful time looking at all the old souvenirs.

Mrs. Carlson's FIFTH AND SIXTH GRADES

The pupils in Mrs. Carlson's fifth and sixth grades last Thursday saw a film called "The Good Earth."

We are going to see two more films on South America. The sixth grade is studying South America.

Monday our science club did some experiments. They were successful. The experiments were done by the vice president, Sally Parsons. The meeting was presided over by the president, Jack Buger.

Mrs. Kilroy's SEVENTH GRADE

On Tuesday the 17th we played Grass Valley and won 18 to 16. The following Friday a few 6th and 7th graders played Gold Flat and tied them 7 to 7. Last Monday played Auburn and won 21 to 5.

On Thursday some seventh graders sang and danced at the spring festival at the high school. It was a very interesting festival.

Mrs. De Mattie's FOURTH GRADE

Mrs. De Mattie has received a letter from a lady in Germany stating that she had received a box of clothing. Several boxes were sent to Europe sometime in March. We hope we will get more letters saying that some other people received clothing.

Brian Corbell's grandmother passed away and his family are going back to Montana for the funeral.

Bobby Smith had his tonsils removed yesterday. We played Mrs. Ford's fourth rade. They beat us this time. The score was 18 to 3. We hope to win next time.

Mrs. Haley's SIXTH GRADE

We have lost one pupil and gained another this week. Edwin Jackson has moved to Reno with his family and left on Tuesday. Caroline Larsen, who left last semester, returned to Nevada City last week, and joined our class Monday.

Last Friday, because of the rain we had a most unusual physical education period. Mr. Bonner brought the wire recording machine to our room and each one of us spoke or read a short paragraph Then he played the recording back to us, and some of us could not even recognize our own voices. We learned that those with low, distinct voices are pleasanter to listen to, and that we should all try to speak more clearly and carefully.

This week we are studying Central America in social science, and learned that the two chief sources of income for most of their states are bananas and coffee. In a motion picture, we saw how the banana plants grow to full height and bear a full bunch of bananas in less than a year. They are harvested while green and sent on special air-conditioned cars and boats to North America.

BATTERY TERMINALS

As soon as corrosion appears on the terminal posts of an automobile battery, the cables should be removed from the battery posts and all corrosion should be removed with a wire brush, advises the California State Automobile association. It is also advisable to scrape the inside of the cable terminals with a knife or blunt instrument. Before replacing the cables, apply a coat of vaseline to the terminal posts to prevent recurrence of this condition.

YOUR RESPONSIBILTY

Traffic laws, enforcement and highway engineering are all vitally important to traffic safety, but in the final analysis the prevention of traffic accidents rests with individual drivers, says the California State Automobile association. Keep alert. Don't get hurt.

ASSESSMENT WORK PLAN UNSETTLED

The house recently passed the bill extending the time to do mining assessment work for this year until Oct. 1. The senate committee has just had this measure under consideration and has amended it by striking out the provision for extending the period for the assessment work and provided for a renewed moratorium or suspension of assessment work for one year until July 1, 1950. This one year's suspension was advocated by Senator Millikin of Colorado. As previously pointed out, the Colorado Mining association was the only mining association in the U. S. supporting another moratorium on mining assessment work.

Now, the measure has to go to the senate. If the senate confirms the action of the senate committee, then the differences between the house bill and tre senate bill will have to be reconciled in conference. I doubt very much if the house committee will recede from its position inasmuch as it is backed by sixteen mining associations as well as government agencies. The difficulty from the standpoint of the miner out in the field is that he is going to have trouble figuring out what is going to happen. If the house bill finally goes through, he would be entitled to an additional three months to do the assessment work for this year, and during that additional three months could also do the required work for the next year, thus killing two birds with one stone. However, if the senate version is adopted. there is no necessity of his doing his work at all. On the other hand, if the two committees get into a wrangle and nothing is done all assessment work for this year must be completed by July 1. I am in hopes we can get the matter straightened out in the near future, so the mining people will know where they stand. In the meantime, it would seem a good idea for miners to provide against the worst and be prepared to do their assessment work.

MINING BILLS GET ACTION

Two other bills of interest to the mining industry got action this week. The measure to compensate miners who suffered financial loss through no fault of their own, trying to meet the nation's demand under government urging for strategic and critical minerals and metals during the war. was cleared for floor action in the house. It has been stalled in the rules committee. The prospects of success for this bill on the floor are very good. A similar bill is now pending on the senate calendar, although it is very different in its terms than the one I am sponsoring.

In addition, the measure providing for incentive payments for exploration and production of strategic and critical minerals and metals for stockpiling was voted out of the full committee on public lands without a dissenting vote. The mining industry is pretty solid in support of this measure. However, the interior department is not altogether satisfied. The interior department has always agreed on the objectives of the bill but has wanted broader powers than either the committee or the mining industry want to give it. With the prices of minerals and metals declining. and many mines throughout the country closing up, the insistence on speedy action on this measure from the miners is rapidly increasing.

LAMP—While waiting for the hookup with electric service we are using a neighbor's lamp. An antique. So old that the once crystal clear glass base is now a deep amethyst. It is a gesture of good neighbor relations and has added to the pleasure of living on this pine covered hillside. Its light is feeble, indeed, but the sunshine that the base has absorbed through out the years to give it the beautiful color seems to fill the room with comfort. And who wants to read at night when one can listen to the adventurous stories told by the marine engineer, our generous and entertaining neighbor.

* * *

PIONEERS—We are living on land that the early settlers of this county and the state passed over. This adds to its interest. On the rancher man's land many relics of that era have been found. Across the highway is a flat stone covered with holes of various sizes. They were made by Indians who came to gather acorns and to grind them on the rock. Now there are no oak trees there. They were cut down for fuel and for building purposes. They have gone with the pioneers. As have the Indians. All that remains are legends. And now, we moderns are pioneering a new mode of living on the ancient land.

* * *

LAND—It is ancient. This particular strip that runs down to the Greenhorn from highway 24 is the oldest land formation in the county and among the oldest deposits of soil in the state. Perhaps that is why the sugar pines are so tall and stately. Appearing large to us, we have ben told that they are second growth. What must their ancestors have been like? Monarchs, ni doubt. When one looks upon the beauty of these children of the ancient forest one forgets the shoddy treatment of so called humans. Their disparaging remarks, their smallness and ignorance. Blessed are the things of God. And so it this land and its trees blessed.

PARENTS—Those of us who have sprung from the pioneers are proud to have had them as parents of our stock. They set a pattern of life for us. Our heritage has been courage, generosity and honesty. We can liken them to these mighty trees. They were strong, proud and in many instances a handsome people. They weathered many storms and tribulations. So now, we who have come to the forest with modern living, must not forget the teachings and follow out the pattern of a generous life as set forth by them. In that way we can build up a proud county, one that the stranger will want to settle in.

This verse from Isaiah (50:7) is the Golden Text of the Christian Science Lesson-Sermon for Sunday, May 29. The subject is "Ancient and Modern Necromancy, alias Mesmerism and Hypnotism, Denounced."

The following citations are included in the sermon:

The Bible: "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness; And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace" (Ephesians 6:14, 15).

"Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "At all times and under all circumstances, overcome evil with good. Know thyself, and God will supply the wisdom and the occasion for a victory over evil. Clad in the panoply of Love, human hatred cannot reach you. The cement of a higher humanity will unite all interests in the one divinity" (p. 571).

WALL STREET JOURNAL CORRESPONDENT URGES GOLD STANDARD BACK

The following letter to the editor of the Wall Street Journal appeared in the issue of Thursday, May 19:

ONE MAN'S FIGHT

Editor, The Wall Street Journal:

I've discovered something that should be very encouraging to individual American citizens who don't want to lose their freedom and individual responsibility to a compulsory state, but who don't know what to do about it.

We can do plenty in the course of our daily existence. Americans are coming out of that hypnotic state that was induced by professionals to cause us to believe that such a trend as in England, with all the expensive paraphernalia of "managed money," irredeemable currency, state planning and controls which destroy freedom are "inevitable." I want to tell you how easy it is to get a favorable reception to a genuine American viewpoint against tired and sloppy-minded professionals who have been insulting the intelligence of our citizens too long.

First, I've discovered what to do. I've seen well-intentioned people throwing money down ratholes in an attempt to oppose or reform one injustice or another. mostly by proxy. I observe that the key to human liberty consists in restoring the gold coin standard of money. No compulsory state has been able to permit the use of money of intrinsic value to its citizens. It's no coincidence that the first moves of Lenin, Mussolini and Hitler were to prohibit the use of gold coin, or gold in other forms suitable for use as money of self-contained value.

Parliamentary government can't resist pressure groups if the power of the purse is in the hands of the government and not in the hands of the taxpayers whose toil produces the wealth. Therefore, when a doctor comes to ask your help against what he knows is a fraud, and asks you to write a letter to your congressman protesting against compulsory medicine; or when an insurance holders protective association member asks you to contribute towards stopping some bill in Congress to spread money in a perpetually continuing scheme that in the long run deteriorates the value of your insurance; or when pensioned employees point out that the money they put into their insurance fund during the past 35 years isn't the same kind of money now; or when your old college protests that if can't continue to struggle against the subsidized politically supported institutions teaching cockeyed economics unless you come to its rescue—to all of these you may say:

Look here now, the first thing to do is to get back the power of the purse. Here's a copy of H. R. 3262 (to return to the gold standard) will you write your congressman this afternoon, asking him to support it?

If you'll get this done first, we'll be able to stop the thing you complain of if it isn't sound when measured by a real standard in the hands of citizens. Now I've told you what to do.

As to how to do it. if you're a business man and carry on advertising, tie your advertising in with a plea to ask Congress for the best kind of money, the gold coin standard. Point out that your wares give value to the dollar and that you deserve a good dollar for them. Here's a tip: people buy from concerns whose principles they respect. Our sales manager wondered at first whether if my energies were devoted so much to the gold standard in "ads" and in talks, I was neglecting our business. After a few months of such "ads" the sales began to climb and he remarked quizzically, "Can't you neglect your business some more, it seems to be getting better?"

I suppose it's because folks know we stand for something: Even the ones who got mad at us and wrote long letters about paper money being good for us, and to whom I replied in good humor. came to know our company better. I got offers to speak at little and big business service clubs, and while I stuck right to the gold standard they all knew I had tools to sell, too.

I've found editors like news which is clearly written and fit to print. So I make clear copy and deliver it to them. I found I could attend meetings of business clubs and when questions on economics were in order I had my chance. I found a labor union paper wanted an "ad" (an A.F.L. paper) against communism. We put in a few "ads" and also submitted articles of which a series were printed on the subject of the gold coin standard and the wage earner. I talked to the Women's Hospital Aid Society on the dangers of irredeemable money to women and the family who are the chief beneficiaries of savings in the form of money.

Of course I hadn't been at this very long before I discovered that the best source material was in the Economists National Committee for Monetary Policy, formed in 1933 to fight the very thing I was, namely irredeemable paper money, power without responsibility. These 92 clear headed monetary economists have been consistently and logically pointing out the plain facts for 15 years. But not enough citizens had been doing anything to support them by personal efforts.

I acquired a list of correspondents and to save effort of writing 450 individual letters I wrote longhand bulletins, reproduced by the "Ditto" system which we use in our plant.

In our reception room we put gold standard literature which often resulted in someone asking to be put on the mailing list. If business men wrote to me, or the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy, we'd supply them with reading material for reception rooms. The business of salesmen is to circulate around. Pretty soon other business men were helping. Leading financial papers printed my articles. The Small Business Men's association was polled and 90 per cent were in favor of a return to the gold standard.

Recently when I learned of the hearings on a Senate bill, I was according a hearing as a private American citizen at a hearing of the Senate's Banking & Currency Committee. together with monetary economists who had specialized in that subject. I merely wrote the chairman, Senator Maybank. and he listed me to be heard. I shall keep track of such hearinsg and go there when permissible.

I've learned that a private American citizen can make his voice heard . . . It can be done and citizens have got to do it. It doesn't need much organization. Just do something every day among the people you meet.

From where I sit ... by Joe Marsh

Two Heads Are Better Than One (Or None)

I get a kick out of buying stuff down at the hardware store. And I always ask for a little advice from one of the two brothers who run it, because I know beforehand exactly what the answer will be.

Like when I needed a new garden hose. "Henry," I says, "how about this new plastic hose—is it really as good as rubber?" "Well," he says, "I'm inclined to think it is—but you'd better ask Tom."

I found Tom in back and asks him the same question. "Well," says Tom, "in my opinion it is—but you'd better ask Henry." "I already have," I says, "and when you two cautious old codgers agree I'd bet my life on the decision."

From where I sit, your own opinion is worth a lot—but so's the other fellow's. That's why I keep saying, over and over, let's be tolerant of the other person's point of view—whether it's on politics or farming— or whether you like milk shakes and he prefers a temperate glass of beer.
